ANNEXURE - I	ICAR- DIRECTORATE OF COLDWATER FISHERIES RESEARCH Bhimtal, 263136, Dist. Nainital, Uttarakhand
ANNEXURE - II	DR. Debajit Sarma Director (Acting)

ANNEXURE – III

Vision, Mission and Key objectives

Vision

Coldwater fisheries and aquaculture to be an important economy activity in upland region for livelihood security and eco-tourism

Mission

To become a centre of excellence for assessing and managing coldwater fishery resources, development of technologies and models of hill aquaculture and formulating strategies for holistic growth of the sector.

Mandate /Key objectives

In accordance with the changing demands of coldwater fisheries sector, the mandate of DCFR has undergone necessary changes from time to time. To achieve the objectives, the Directorate has the following functions:

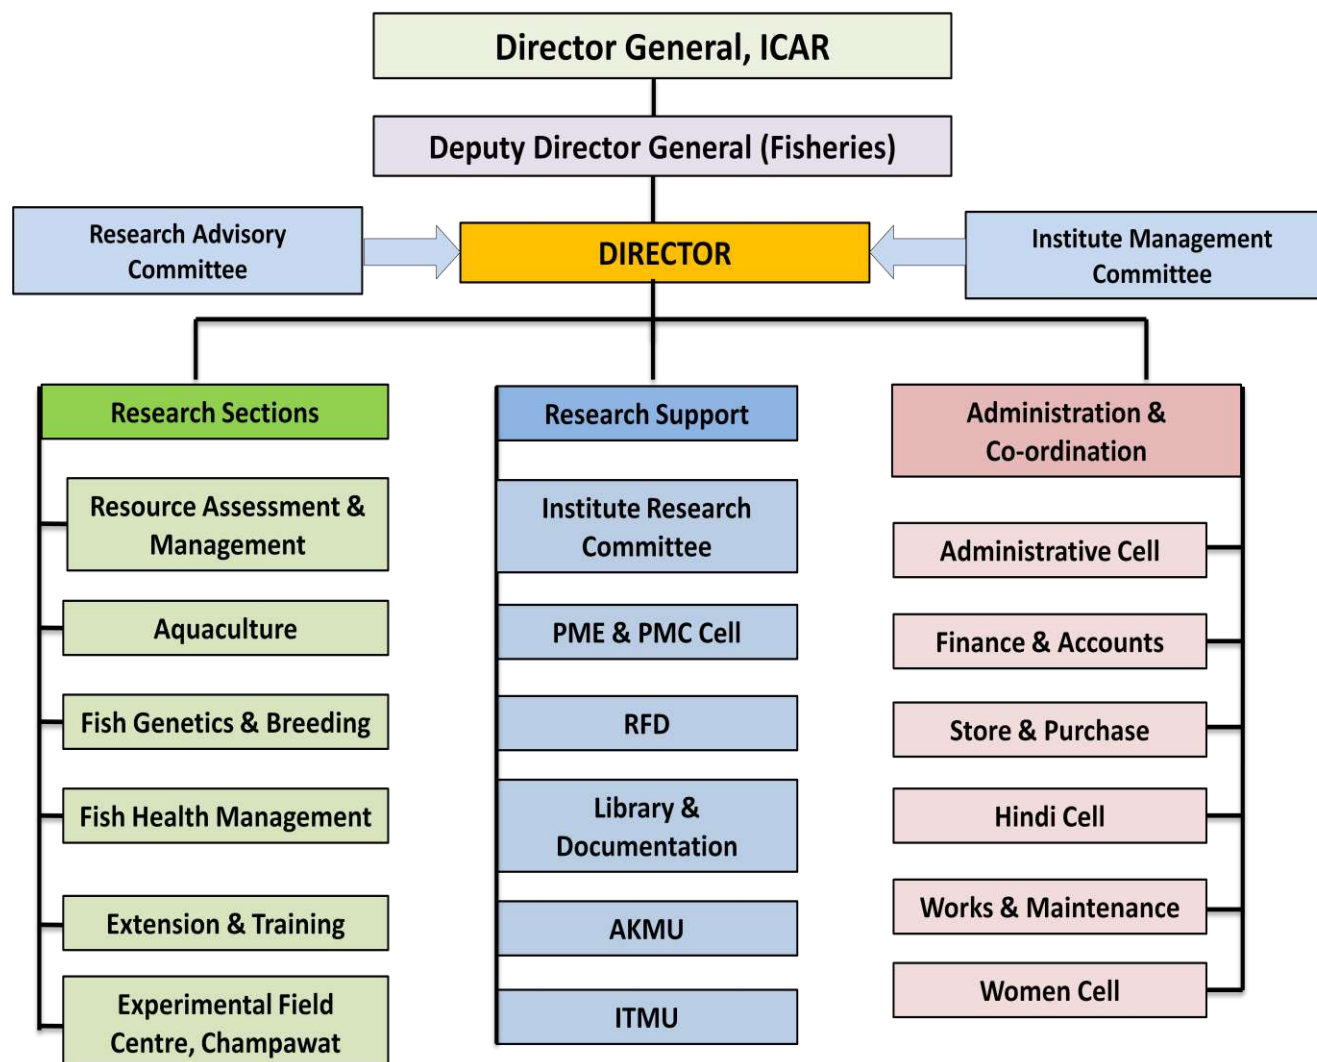

- Basic, strategic and applied research in coldwater fisheries and aquaculture
- Act as repository of hill fisheries resources
- Human Resource Development through training, education and extension.

ANNEXURE – IV

- Coldwater fisheries research training, education and extension

ANNEXURE – V

Organization Chart

ANNEXURE-VI

The Estimates Committee of the fourth Lok Sabha (1967-68) emphasized the need for intensive research to provide a scientific basis for development of trout and other hill fisheries. The committee further suggested that vigorous attempts be made by the Central Inland Fisheries Research Institute (CIFRI), Barrackpore, Kolkata for the development of trout and other high altitude fisheries in hilly areas of Uttar Pradesh, Karnataka, Kerala and Tamilnadu. Subsequent review of research programmes of the CIFRI by the achievement audit committees in 1972, 1978 and quinquennial review team in 1983 repeatedly stressed the urgent need to intensify research on coldwater fisheries by creating infrastructure and providing additional scientific, technical and other support staff. During mid-term appraisal of the VI plan the ICAR decided for intensification and strengthening of coldwater fisheries research. In spite of various recommendations made by different committees, the coldwater fisheries research under the aegis of CIFRI remained limited due to lack of infrastructure facilities. Even the manpower support for coldwater fisheries remained same since third five-year plan period. Subsequently the working group on Agriculture Research and Education for the VII plan suggested that research in this area be strengthened by having a separate National Research Centre (NRC). It was in 1987 that the National Research Centre on Coldwater Fisheries (NRCCWF) was born as an independent centre directly under ICAR control with its temporary headquarters at Haldwani in erstwhile Uttar Pradesh. Subsequently, from May 1997 this temporary headquarters of the institute was shifted to Bhimtal about 30 km from Haldwani, where the main complex of NRCCWF was constructed.

Keeping in view the ever expanding activities of NRCCWF and the greater potential of coldwater fisheries in different Himalayan states, in a significant decision during the XI plan, it has been made a Directorate of Coldwater Fisheries Research (DCFR), to develop location, situation and system specific technologies by utilizing and augmenting resources in all the Himalayan states from Jammu and Kashmir to Arunachal Pradesh. From the humble beginning, the DCFR is now emerging as the nodal facility in the country where research investigations are under taken both on capture and culture aspects with a focus on exotic and coldwater species. Since its inception, DCFR, in spite of limited scientific and technical manpower has made significant contribution for proper appraisal of coldwater fishery resources and evolve suitable technologies to propagate important fish species in hills.

The DCFR is on its glorious path of virtually actualizing its vision by imparting boon of quality research in sustainable coldwater fisheries production, management and conservation.
